Divine Validation Mechanisms

There are main systems and subsystems of ways that the Scriptures prove themselves to be the Word of the Most High, a production that can only be of divine origin. The usual slander against Scripture does not stand up to examination, that its writers wrote prophecy fulfillment narratives after events they "identified" as fulfillments had already occurred. Another angle of Scripture attack is to reinterpret prophecies so that they don't match the historical outcomes, essentially making the sceptics guilty of the very thing they charge the authors of Scripture with doing. The Scripture validation methods discussed here prove both these charges lies based on their extreme improbability.

For those supporting Scripture's complete historical validity, it is not enough to simply validate matters of fact, such as proving that certain things in Scripture turn out to be historical, as proved by archaeology, or that prophecies came true unless the timeline of the prediction being made before the fulfillment occurred is established. Even a broken clock is right twice a day like historical fiction.

Both Judaism and Christianity have subverted the biblical timeline to their uniquely corrupted narratives, Judaism in denying Messiah Yeshua, and Christianity in denying the Torah. As a result, the best validation mechanisms have gone unnoticed, and only enough have been noticed to keep both sides religious believers in Scripture, even if one of their own twisting. The twisted narratives give the nations a lot of excuses to continue in their false gods and false anti Scriptural ideologies.

Validation method No. 1. The two opposing halves of a key fit together when it is not expected. Deliverance is from the Jews. That is what Messiah said. Deliverance is from Israel, and even the house of Israel. Deliverance is even accomplished through the house of Israel that was scattered into the nations. Deliverance is through Jews who deny Messiah, and the house of Israel that worshiped false gods. Even when God's people rebel, God still has a use for them. He uses them for deliverance. Christianity and Judaism are two broken halves of a key that once fit together. The house of Israel and the house of Judah are still a nation in the sight of the Most High, and his nation is used to accomplish salvation, whether individuals or factions of it be right or wrong. Both the right and wrong are used to work deliverance. As it says, God works all things together for good, for those that love him.

Under this validation method, we have two elements. The first is non-biblical chronology in Mesopotamia going back to ca 2301 BC with the rise of Sargon of Akkad. This is the first half of a key delivered to us by Jews and Christians. It wasn't expected to perfectly agree with Scripture. The other half of the key is the Scripture chronology. And these two halves fit together perfectly, as shown in this chronology.

Another key pair is Egyptian chronology going back to the beginning of the 11th dynasty and the Middle Kingdom, a key date being 1866 BC. The biblical chronology also fits with this. Both key halves go together. It is not that we made them fit together. Unlike the radical revision of some chronologists (e.g. David Rohl) the key half of Egyptian chronology is used essentially unmodified from its conventional form, and likewise the other key half, the biblical chronology is essentially that of Josephus in its broadest form. Josephus gives us the long Judges chronology, and the short sojourn chronology. These two factors are implemented more precisely in this chronology, but still in the same ballpark as Josephus.

The Mesopotamian Key fits with the biblical key. The Egyptian Key fits with the biblical key.

The next key is the Jubilee. This was delivered to me by others. But I was able to expand and complete it. This cycle was not expected to match the other keys, or it should not be by random chance. But it does, at creation, with the famine in Egypt, with the entry into Israel, with the reign of Saul, with the reign of Hezekiah, with the reign of Nebuchadnezzar, with Daniel 9, with the historic Sabbatical year known from the Second Temple period, and Zoar Tombstones. This key half fits exactly with the Biblical chronology half.

Next, is the key within the key. The 390 years of sin for Israel, and the 40 years sin for Judah are identified. That's the first half of this key. The second half is that 70 land sabbaths that Israel and Judah did not observe fits into these "sin" years. This also is not the result of random chance.

These are not all the keys that fit. Let me summarize. Egyptian and Mesopotamian chronology fit, essentially unmodified from conventional form. The Jubilee and Sabbatical years fit. The years of sin and unobserved Sabbatical years fit. One more key should be mentioned here. The calendar and astronomical calculations fit. It is not expected that these fit by chance. Even Joshua's long day fits. I could not have made them fit unless they did fit already. I only discovered that they do fit.

On the other hand, based on the above proof, I have made minor adjustments (or choices), because we lack complete information, on sections of the secular side of the chronology. In otherwords, where things ought to fit harmoniously, I have made slight adjustments so they do fit harmoniously. So in that respect, I am responsible for engineering elements of this chronology. However, a lot of the details are not exactly my engineering to make them fit because they should. A good deal of it is constrained by known facts. At a fine tuned level, the secular chronology is as I have received it and my interpretations put together. And it is not always possible to separate interpretation from fact here. But I believe my interpretations to be in the range of possibility.

This is not a comprehensive review of validation systems. It is just an overview to get started. Those who study will discover all manner of validations I have not mentioned here, and indeed will discover validations of their own. This is why we study Scripture. It is because knowledge of the Word of the Most High brings all manner of deliverance, and not just on things I have highlighted.

Canon of History: It was an imperative of Rome not only to claim sucession from Peter, but to wipe out the history of any other non Catholic Christianity tracing its orgin to the Apostles. For as long as there was an alternative historical connection they would not be safe in their mission to control the Church.
